Hi Mark,

I copied the article for you to see. I called Sam and left a message. Thanked him for the article, and let him know; if thing go well work plans would be finalized this winter and investigations and well installation and such could begin next summer. I asked him to call me back. Hope this helps,

Mike

Mark,

Thanks for a productive negotiating session in Columbia Falls last week. I hope that you and your team had an uneventful trip back to Denver.

Below please see a link to an article on the front page of yesterday's Daily Interlake describing last weeks public access meeting held by EPA. Note the last sentence of the article, which states that, if EPA were to list the site on the NPL, the RI investigation would be completed during the winter and clean up would begin next year. This is a very quick schedule and not what I recall Mike saying. Do you think that it would be possible for Mike or someone from EPA to review this article and contact the reporter to correct the statement about the schedule.

Many thanks and best regards,

Andrew
